Tip Six: The Three Musketeers

Reading, writing, and spelling go hand-in-hand. The more you read and write the more that spelling improves; the more that spelling improves, the easier it is to read and write!

Pick up a pen and write. Write about anything or nothing at all. Look up a challenging word and write it over and over until it is ingrained in your brain. Then pick a book and read. The more that you read and write, the more that spelling will improve. After all, research has shown the interdependence of reading, writing, and spelling. It's win-win-win!
